MEMORANDUM OPINION

The Court has before it Plaintiffs Mary Elizabeth Fergusson's (Fergusson) motion to remand. For the reasons discussed below, this motion will be granted.

This action seeks compensation for property damage sustained in Hurricane Katrina. The state court complaint alleges that the plaintiff was a policy holder insured by Defendant Allstate Property & Casualty Insurance Company (Allstate) and that Defendant Mark Manuel (Manuel) was the agent through whom plaintiff purchased her Allstate policy.

According to the complaint, when Fergusson purchased her Allstate homeowners policy, "Fergusson specifically asked Mark Manuel if she needed flood insurance to cover damage to her home caused by a hurricane and was told that her homeowners policy would provide coverage." (Complaint Paragraph 16) Fergusson contends that Manuel misrepresented the extent of the coverage Fergusson purchased from Allstate, and Fergusson also alleges that Manuel failed to procure the insurance Fergusson sought. Fergusson alleges that she relied upon the statements made by Manuel in deciding not to purchase additional insurance coverage.

Legal Theory Supporting Removal - Fraudulent Joinder

Allstate's citizenship is diverse from the plaintiffs'; Cannon's citizenship is not. If Cannon is a properly named defendant, this Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1332 because there is no complete diversity of citizenship and because there is no federal question raised on the face of the complaint.

Removal is premised on Allstate's assertion that the plaintiffs have fraudulently joined Manuel as a defendant, and, having made that assertion, Allstate bears the burden of proving it to be true. B., Inc., v. Miller Brewing Co., 663 F.2d 545 (5th Cir.1981). Allstate's burden has been characterized as a heavy one because, in making the assessment whether joinder of a non-diverse defendant is fraudulent or legitimate, the district court must assume all the well-pleaded facts in the complaint to be true, must grant the plaintiff all reasonable favorable inferences, and must resolve all doubtful issues of state law in favor of the party seeking remand. Dodson v. Spiliada Maritime Corp., 951 F.2d 40 (5th Cir.1992); Hart v. Bayer Corp., 199 F.3d 239 (5th Cir.2000).

Under these guidelines, this court must determine whether there is any reasonable basis upon which the plaintiffs could prevail and establish a right of recovery against the non-diverse defendant. If there is such a basis, the case must be remanded for resolution in the court where the action was originally filed. These standards are even more liberal toward the plaintiffs than the standards that apply to a motion under F.R.Civ.P. 12(b) since, in addition to accepting the allegations of the complaint and granting all reasonable factual inferences in favor of the plaintiffs, the Court must also give the plaintiffs the benefit of all reasonable doubt as to issues of state law, a factor not applicable to a Rule 12(b) motion.

Allegations of the Complaint

Fergusson has alleged that when she purchased this Allstate homeowners policy, Manuel told her she did not need to purchase flood insurance. According to the complaint, Fergusson relied upon Manuel's statements in purchasing the Allstate coverage in question and in deciding not to purchase additional coverage for flood damage. Plaintiff alleges that Manuel's representations were negligent, that the representations were material, that she reasonably relied upon these representations, and that she has suffered damage as a result of this reliance.

Standard of Care Applicable to Insurance Agents

Under applicable Mississippi law, an insurance agent or broker who undertakes to procure insurance for a customer is under a duty to the prospective purchaser to exercise reasonable care. McKinnon v. Batte, 485 So.2d 295 (Miss.1986); Lovett v. Bradford, 676 So.2d 893 (Miss.1996); First United Bank of Poplarville v. Reid, 612 So.2d 1131 (Miss.1992).

Negligent Misrepresentation Under Mississippi Law

Under applicable Mississippi law, in order to state a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, the aggrieved party must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence:

1. That there was a misrepresentation (or omission) of a fact;
2. That the misrepresentation (or omission) was material or significant;
3. That the misrepresentation (or omission) was the product of negligence, i.e. that the person making the representation or omission failed to exercise reasonable care;
4. That the person to whom the representation (or omission) was made reasonably relied upon the representation (or omission); and
5. That the person to whom the representation (or omission) was made suffered damages as a direct and proximate result of that reasonable reliance.

Berklene v. Bank of Mississippi, 453 So.2d 699 (Miss.1984); Spragins v. Sunburst Bank, 605 So.2d 777 (Miss.1992). These essential elements may fit the plaintiff's theory of recovery and allegations against Manuel.

An actionable negligent misrepresentation may occur in circumstances where there is no legal duty underlying the representation. In Berklene v. Bank of Mississippi, 453 So.2d 699 (Miss.1984), a bank's statements concerning a bank customer's credit worthiness, made gratuitously in response to an inquiry by someone to whom the bank owed no duty, were found actionable when the statements proved false and were relied upon by the inquirer in extending credit to the bank's customer.

Thus, an insurance agent who undertakes to give his advice concerning the coverages an insured should purchase in circumstances where the advice is reasonably relied upon by the prospective insured may incur liability if the advice is the product of a failure on the part of the agent to exercise reasonable care.

Representations made by an insurer's agent may become binding when an insured reasonably relies upon the representations in purchasing insurance. Scott v. Transport Indemnity Co., 513 So.2d 889 (Miss.1987); Nichols v. Shelter Life Insurance Co., 923 F.2d 1158 (5th Cir.1991).

Of course, the truth of Fergusson's allegations, the circumstances in which Manuel's alleged representations were made, the question of whether the plaintiff reasonably relied upon the statements she attributes to Manuel, and the question whether the representations, if made, were made negligently, are questions for the finder of fact to decide after consideration of the evidence supporting the claim and consideration of the evidence offered by the defense. At this juncture, however, Plaintiff's allegations must be accepted as true; the plaintiff must be granted all reasonable inferences in favor of her theory of recovery; and any doubtful issues of state law must be resolved in her favor.

Without venturing any opinion on the merits of Fergusson's claim, it appears to me that under the standards applicable to ascertaining whether a fraudulent joinder has occurred, Manuel and Allstate have failed to establish that the plaintiff has no viable legal theory upon which they may proceed against Manuel.

Accordingly, I will grant the motion to remand without prejudice to the right of the defendants to remove this case a second time in the event the case should become removable during subsequent state court proceedings. The subsequent removal of this action would, of course, be subject to the one-year time limit for the removal of diversity cases under 28 U.S.C. §1446 and all other rules and decisions governing the right of removal.

An appropriate order will be entered.

Decided this 28th day of July, 2006.
